

Nicholas Viselli (Associate Director) has been a TBTB core company member since 1997, performing in nearly every production since that time. Some of his favorite roles with TBTB include: Creon/Laius/Slave in the 2006 production of Ted Hughes's adaptation of Seneca's Oedipus, which the New York Times called "A striking feat of acting" and the title role in the 2006 production of Shakespeare's Hamlet, where NYTheatre.com referred to his performance as "Clear-eyed, straightforward, enormously appealing: A terrific and daring portrayal that enlivens a role that's so familiar".

He has also directed several plays for TBTB and has served as the company's sound designer, travel coordinator and administrative associate. He has attended the last six International Theater Festivals for the Blind and Visually Impaired in Zagreb, Croatia as an actor and was the key coordinator for the international collaboration between TBTB, New Life Theater from Zagreb and the Extant Theater from Great Britain in 2011.

In New York City, he has also worked with the Pearl Theater Company, Performers Access Studio, The Oasis Theater and The Riverside Shakespeare Co. to name a few. Most recently, he starred opposite comic legend, Jackie Mason, in the upcoming feature film, One Angry Man and was featured in a second Jackie Mason film, Jackie Goldberg: Private Dick. He could also be seen in the film, The Amazing Spiderman. He studied at the Royal National Theater in London with Richard Eyre, Patsy Rodenberg, Stephen Daldry, Simon McBurney, Stephen Warbeck and Sir Ian McKellan and is a graduate of Hofstra University. Nick is married to actress and TBTB core company member, Ann Marie Morelli.
